PKvitality closed its crowdfunding campaign with success

PARIS - September 12, 2017 - PKvitality, an advanced bio-wearable company, have just closed their crowdfunding campaign for the K'Watch project on the SmartAngels platform.

PKvitality's crowdfunding campaign has finally ended after being extended for one and a half months due to an outpour of requests. The company was more than glad to have extended the campaign to cater to more of the investors and was truly grateful to all those who participated. PKvitality ended this campaign on a high note — exceeding their initial goal and getting 2 times more than their targeted funding of 795153€.

The fundings will be used on the development of K'Watch.

About PKvitality

PKvitality is an affiliate of PKparis, an acclaimed French company specializing in smart premium nomad connected objects. It is fusing this expertise along with 20 years of biological research to bring its miniaturized SkinTaste® technology to market. SkinTaste® is a revolutionary biosensor array that uses micro-needles (<0.5mm long) to collect and analyze chemical compositions of the interstitial fluid found just below the surface of the skin. Contained in a K'apsul®, it is integrated in several devices such as watches or arm bands and is available in several versions to allow the analysis of a specific number of biomarkers.
